Abstract

Joseph Skvarenina served as the Hancock County Historian from 1992-2025. He was involved in various history and service related organizations across the county. His research interest primarily consisted of local history matters, this includes: businesses, churches, local philanthropic organizations, schools, war veterans, the civil rights movement and minority events, recording oral histories, and the World Wars. This collection consists of negatives and prints he has collected.

Access Restrictions

Advance notice is required to view images. The Library does not possess the means to duplicate or digitize images from negatives.

Biographical Note

Joseph Skvarenina received his Bachelor of Science in Education and History and Master of Education degrees from Kent State University. He was employed at the American Cancer Society, the Christian Advocate, Lutheran High School, the National Benevolent Association, Habitat for Humanity, Center for Leadership Development, the Indiana-Kentucky Synod Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, and Ivy Tech Community College. Mr. Skvarenina wrote a weekly history article for the Greenfield Daily Reporter newspaper, published several books and articles, contributed to the Hancock County Historical Society's "Log Chain" newsletter, and served as Hancock County Historian from 1992 until his death in 2025.

While living in Hancock County, Skvarenina was heavily involved with local history organizations as both a member and officer. They include:

Freetown Village, board member
Greenfield Historic Landmarks, founding member
Hancock County Historical Society, president
Historic Cemetery Commission, member
Indiana National Road Association, board member
Riley Old Home Society, vice president
Shirley Historical Society, board member

For his service to his community, Skvarenina was awarded the key to the City of Greenfield by Mayor Keith J. McClarnon and was recognized by the Indiana General Assembly. He was also awarded the “Distinguished Hoosier” award by Indiana Governor Frank O’Bannon and the 2015 Hubert Hawkins History Award by the Indiana Historical Society.

Joseph Lee Skvarenina died on September 16, 2025 at the age of 77.

Arrangement

The collection is organized into three series: Building and Grounds, Groups, and Individuals.

Scope and Content Note

The collection was given to the library in segments, much without description beyond the content submitted. No discernable original order was noted by either librarian. Therefore the collection was divided into three series of significant breadth. They are as follows.

The Buildings and Grounds series contains images of properties. The subject of this series are buildings, grounds, or properties and their exterior or interior and/or events directly related to said property. Examples include but are not limited to: events such as building dedications, anniversaries, demolition, or time capsules; aerials; architectural drawings or sketches; or general photographs of the property. Person(s) may be in the image but as stated images that are classified as “buildings and grounds” the focus should be of the property.

The Groups series contains images of persons and/or things. The subject of this series are images with multiple individuals. Examples include but are not limited to: two or more people posing; classroom photos; events like parades, home life, or class reunions; and church groups. Identified buildings and grounds may be in the image but as stated images that are classified as “groups” the focus should be of multiple persons.

The Individuals series contains images of a singular person. Examples include but are not limited to: portraits, singular sports action shots, or other posed photographs. Identified buildings and grounds may be in the image but as stated images that are classified as “individuals” should focus on a singular person.

Indexing Terms

The following terms have been used to index the description of this collection in the Hancock County Public Library’s online catalog. Materials about related topics, person, or places can be found by searching the catalog using these terms.

Separated Material

Removed multiple duplications of materials, photocopies, and some items not related to Hancock County. A great number of these photographs contained no known person, places, or relation to Hancock County. Each image was evaluated and discarded or kept as best seen fit by library staff.

Added Material

Occasionally materials related to local history and genealogy have been integrated into this collection that were donated by other individuals. It is the Library's opinion that this is the best way to preserve, record, and make available these materials at the library. These materials have been noted as outside materials whenever possible.

Administrative Information

Usage Restrictions:

Legal ownership, physical custody, and some intellectual property rights of these materials have been transferred to the Hancock County Public Library. Upon the death of Joseph L. Skvarenina, all of his copyrights shall be transferred to the Library. For more information, please contact the Library Director.

Given the copyright potential for some of the images, the Library will not license images from this collection for personal, public, or private use. When possible, the Library will make available copies of images to an individual.
